

After taking some time to make a resume and fill it out I was prompted to enter my resume into an AI tool to revise it and change the appearance of it to cater towards certain jobs I was looking for. In this case I decided to go down the route of a Professional Real-Estate Agent, Then an Automotive Production Supervisor. Two completely different jobs that require different skillsets. I then prompted my AI with the task of refining and tailoring the resume to each of these jobs. I thought it was clever how the AI was able to reword and change what I had previously typed up into a way that would best fit the specific job title I was going for. For example my original resume shares some of the things I experienced and learned through my various jobs, then AI went in and made it sound much more knowledgeable and professional. The Real-Estate Resume shares strong and powerful wording to express the communications/ sales forward mindset that I gained from these experiences along with how I have sales experiences from previous employment. On the other hand the Automotive supervisor expressed more of a management role and hit key points regarding communications amongst colleges and keeping a clean and safe work environment so everyone can thrive. I personally think that AI assisting in crafting my resume for these jobs helped tremendously and shows to be quite a useful tool.
